"We were in desperate need of shade in our backyard. We were fortunate to find Outdoor Elements and were impressed from the very start. We are so pleased with the final product and have received many compliments. The white and colored lights embedded in the pergola are not only stylish but useful, and we can easily open and close our louvers with a remote from indoors or outdoors. Without question, we will work with Outdoor Elements again in the future and will recommend them to anyone needing their services."

"We love our Outdoor Elements louvered roof patio cover. We wanted a cover over our outside kitchen but didn't want to lose light next to our existing covered patio. The louvered patio cover was the perfect addition. We have the best of both worlds. We can have it closed when needed to protect our kitchen from the weather and can open it when we are entertaining and using the barbeque. The design and installation team were top notch!"

-Ray and Jessica Neder

"We had a complex space and Outdoor Elements spent the time to ensure the plans met our needs. We now love spending time outside under our new louvered roof and enjoying our yard."

-Renee and Mark Sherman

"We absolutely love our new Outdoor Elements patio cover! We wanted to add a patio cover that would provide comfort from the elements and something that would go with our new backyard design. Outdoor Elements was the perfect solution! We can entertain and cook for family and friends, while hanging out by the pool."

Manufactured in the USA

Outdoor Elements was established with a vision to introduce an innovative product with the highest standards of design and engineering built right here in the United States, inspired by a tradition of ingenuity and hard work.

At Outdoor Elements, we are committed to designing, building, and manufacturing in the USA and the majority of our materials are sourced from other American companies. Our components such as extruded aluminum, motors, electronics, machine fittings, and powder coating materials, create the strongest, most durable louvered roof system on the market.

Unparalleled Engineering and Materials

Outdoor Elements roofs are built from extruded materials vs. the rolled materials other manufacturers use. Extruded materials are formed from a large piece of aluminum which is melted to over 900 degrees and then run through a press and die in the shape desired. It's then stretched, cooled, and treated and is typically about 1/8" thick. Extruded components are used in situations where precision is vital, such as NASA.

Rolled materials are aluminum that is run through a series of rollers that bend it into a shape. Those shapes are a little less defined and typical of what you would find in low end aluminum siding and are typically 1/16" thick.

Outdoor Elements Signature Louvered Roof systems are engineered with the highest quality materials, including high-grade extruded aluminum components and stainless steel fasteners. The aluminum components are powder coated with a superior (Super Durable) exterior grade coating making them highly resistant to corrosion and deterioration.

Durable Powder Coating

Unlike other systems that are painted, Outdoor Elements systems are filled and protected by utilizing powder coating. In our system, all aluminum components are built with an electronics process that applies a powder coating material to fill the entire surface and then baked at 400 degrees. This creates a much higher level of quality and endurance.

State-of-the-Art Electronic Components

Outdoor Elements electronic components have been engineered by some of the top suppliers and our control systems sourced from some of the largest, most recognizable companies in America. You can count on their durability and reliability.
